“The TTM project was a wonderful way of meeting new people with different perspectives on recent and not so recent History. It was a journey where we all collected bits and pieces of data in a variety of media, including diaries, photographs, testimonies and music, and I could feel the group getting richer and richer every step of the way. Sometimes it was hard to take all the information there was to collect, because of the cultural barrier or the characteristics of the data we were presented with, but we all saw, during this project, History from different points of view, and we all took note of what happened and what is happening nowadays and we tried to share points of view on the different subjects. I was surprised by the diversity of opinions and perspectives we can get from just a small group of young people, and I learned so much from this journey that I wish more people like me could embark on such an experience, meet such nice places, and get in touch with different ways of regarding what has happened and what is happening in Europe. I’m very grateful for this opportunity!”
